In 1925, he was appointed assistant professor of history at the University of Pennsylvania. From 1930 to 1966, he was professor of history at Penn, but over the years, he also served as Dean of Graduate School of Arts and Sciences (1952–1966) and Vice Provost (1953–1966). He also served as a visiting professor at Columbia University from 1944 to 1945, at Cambridge University from 1948 to 1949, and at Stanford University in 1952. In 1962, he taught as a Fulbright lecturer in India and Japan.

His work extended beyond the classroom and he served as president of Middle States Association of History Teachers from 1932 to 1933; president of Pennsylvania Federation of Historical Societies from 1940 to 1942; member of Pennsylvania Historical Commission from 1940 to 1943; Member of Council, American Historical Association from 1943 to 1947; chairman of Social Science Research Council from 1949 to 1953; president of Association of Graduate Schools of the American Association of Universities from 1963 to 1964; vice president of American Historical Association from 1964 to 1965; president of American Historical Association from 1965 to 1966; and Chairman of Council of Graduate Schools in the United States. He was married to Jeannette Paddock Nichols (1890-1982), who was also a historian and an author.

Nichols published a number of books on American history and politics. He won the Pulitzer Prize for History for The Disruption of American Democracy in 1949. A few of his other publications include The Democratic Machine, 1850-1854 (1923), Advance Agents of American Destiny (1956), a biography of Franklin Pierce (1958), Religion and American Democracy (1959), Stakes of Power, 1845-1877 (1961), Blueprints for Leviathan: American Style (1963), and The Invention of American Political Parties (1967). Scope and Contents

This collection consists primarily of manuscripts and typescripts for several of Nichols' works, as well as a scrapbook of newspaper clippings of articles from the Philadelphia Press written by Francis Newton Thorpe. Researchers will find handwritten and annotated typescript drafts of manuscripts for Nichols' biography of Franklin Pierce and his book The Disruption of the American Democracy, as well as typescripts for The Stakes of Power and Blueprints of Leviathan: American Style. Nichols' books address democracy, the Democratic Party, and politics in the United States, generally, during the 19th century. The last item in the collection consists of a scrapbook of articles, correspondence and reviews written by Francis Newton Thorpe from 1893 to 1895 for the Philadelphia Press. Thorpe (1857-1926) was born in the town of Swampscott, MA. After pursuing graduate studies at the University of Pennsylvania, he became a University Fellow at the age of twenty-eight, holding the title of Professor of American Constitutional History from 1885 to 1898. He was an active member of the Pennsylvania Historical Society and a leading member of the American Historical Association, and was admitted to the Pennsylvania bar in 1885. Thorpe's scholarship on state constitutions remains some of the most influential and foundational work in the field of state constitutional development.
