Biography/History

---

Edna E. LaPorte Strumpf, a native of Virginia, attended the Mt. Sinai Hospital Training School for Nurses in Philadelphia from February 1934 to her graduation in May 1937. Upon completion of nurses' training, Edna LaPorte worked at Mt. Sinai for ten months as a staff nurse. She later accepted a position at the Bronx Veterans Hospital where she became a supervisor. In 1943, LaPorte joined the United States Army and was assigned to the 126th Evacuation Hospital stationed in Europe. She married Herbert Strumpf, also a nurse, in 1944. Following discharge from the army on January 15, 1946, she worked at the Veterans Hospital in Northport, New York, until the birth of her first child in 1947. During the years after, in Selkirk, New York, Strumpf raised three children and served as a volunteer for the American Red Cross Program in Albany, the Bethlehem Ambulance, and on the Board of Directors for a local resident home for the mentally and physically disabled.

Scope and Contents

This collection consists predominantly of lecture notes and exams from the period of Edna Strumpf's attendance at Mt. Sinai Hospital Training School for Nurses in Philadelphia. The school merged in 1953 with the school of nursing at Jewish Hospital to become the Albert Einstein Medical Center School of Nursing. The notes are comprehensive and cover a wide range of topics, including professional issues. Also available are graduation and class reunion materials, a procedure manual, a history of the school, and a selection of promotional pamphlets distributed by the Sharp & Dohme pharmaceutical firm of Philadelphia and Baltimore. Perhaps most interestingly, a collection of correspondence from before Strumpf's matriculation at Mt. Sinai is included. One such letter is from Good Housekeeping, which at the time provided a referral service through their school department.

SERIES 1. PERSONAL, 1933-1934.

Scope and Contents note

This series predominately consists of Strumpf's correspondence prior to her enrollment at Mt. Sinai Hospital Training School for Nurses. Included is a letter from Good Housekeeping in response to Strumpf's request for information on schools of nursing. Good Housekeeping provided Strumpf with a list of registered schools of nursing as well as advice on the application process. Garfield Memorial Hospital, correspondence with which is also included in this series, is listed on the Good Housekeeping material, although Mt. Sinai is not. This series is useful in examining the selection of training schools with correspondence between Strumpf and the schools, her acceptance at Mt. Sinai Garfield Memorial Hospitals, and of the matriculation procedures at each school. This series also includes a 1991 "Recollections" of Strumpf's training school days and subsequent services in the army, family life, and voluntary activities. Five photographs of Strumpf and her classmates (1934-1937) are also included with a one page caption sheet describing each print.
