Biography/History

The Association of Community Health Nursing Educators (ACHNE) provides a meeting ground for professionals in community and public health nursing education, administration, research, and practice. ACHNE has been led by elected members who have guided the organization in providing networking, educational opportunities, and professional advancement through curriculum development, leadership experience, and consensus building through committee work, publications, participation in the Quad Council presentation held during annual meetings of the American Public Health Association, and an annual Spring Institute.

ACHNE developed out of informal meetings of public health nursing educators who gathered at annual meetings of the American Public Health Association (APHA) from 1974-1978. On May 1, 1978, a number of faculty attended a planned two-day institute on graduate education for public/community health education, at the Department of Public Health Nursing, School of Public Health, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. After an evening session, the attendees met to discuss the formation of a permanent society of teachers of community/public health nursing. After much debate, a resolution to establish the Association of Graduate Faculty in Community Health/Public Health Nursing (AGFCHIPHN) was unanimously accepted. Dr. Virginia M. Ohlson, head of the Department of Public Health Nursing at the College of Nursing, University of Illinois-Chicago, was elected to be the first president. By-laws were developed to establish an executive committee made up of officers, the immediate past president, the nominating committee chairperson, and two elected members-at-large, which was responsible for acting on behalf of the association between meetings of the membership. The aims of the association were to identify and explore issues relevant to the graduate preparation of community health/public health nurses; to formulate and disseminate recommendations relevant to graduate education in community health/public health nursing and practice; to assist in the development of quality graduate education programs and to stimulate research in community health and public health nursing.

Many of the group's activities centered on its annual meetings that continued to be held in the fall during the annual meeting of the APHA. By the 1980s, ACHNE had also initiated an annual Spring Institute, an educational and outreach program that included original research in the field of community health/public health nursing. The committees continued their work throughout the year and presented reports to the membership at the annual fall meeting. The executive committee usually met twice a year, once at the fall meeting and again at the Spring Institute.

In 1986, the association changed its name to ACHNE to reflect the organization's focus on education and community health/public health nursing. In the same year, ACHNE reached out to formally include Canadian members. Two years later, the organization had grown to include more than 330 CHN/PHN educators.

During the early 1990s, ACHNE joined with three other public health associations to form the Quad Council of Public Health Nursing Organizations (Quad Council) to address matters of mutual concern including public policy issues. The other members of the Council are the Public Health Nursing Section of the APHA, the Association of State and Territorial Directors of Nursing (ASTDN), and the American Nurses Association Council on Nursing Practice. ACHNE has remained active in the Quad Council whose work continues today.

ACHNE underwent structural refinements in 1990 to link officer, board of directors, and committee structures and to establish the regional members-at-large. The organization responded to the need for office space and support staff by contracting for membership services and programs. From 1991-1994, ACHNE employed a firm in Lexington, Kentucky, to perform some of its office functions. In 1994 it contracted with a service firm in Skokie, Illinois, and by 2004, the business office had been relocated to New York State.

Another innovation of the early 1990s was the Archives Committee. In 1991, the Executive Committee appointed Marilyn King, DNSc., RN, University of Virginia School of Nursing, as Chair of the Committee with the charge to begin working on a plan to collect the association's records. Following discussions with the Center for the Study of the History of Nursing, University of Pennsylvania, the Center agreed to become the repository for ACHNE's permanent records, and in November 1992, ACHNE's board resolved to donate the association's records to the Center. The Archives Committee Association, with Center staff, prepared an article for the organization's Winter 1993 newsletter announcing the plan for the organizational archives. The article listed the following types of documents as priorities for collection and preservation:

Minutes of annual meetings, board meetings, and committee meetings; organizational materials such as by-laws, membership lists, financial records, and membership letters and mailings; presentations and papers presented at ACHNE meetings; correspondence with ACHNE and with other organizations, etc.; reports from representatives to other groups, end of term officer summaries and/or memoirs (these latter are best if chatty and can be taped for later transcription); publications such as news letters and white papers; and any surveys done, including the raw data and any analysis of the data. The article went on to discuss the committee's interest in conducting an oral history project to collect interviews at some future date and to make the tapes and transcripts available to researchers.

ACHNE members have continued to collect records of historical value. The Center has accessioned eight shipments of records since the Archives Committee made its initial appeal in 1993. Some of the shipments came directly from the Archives Committee; others from the business office; and from individual officers or members. The initial accessions included papers and minutes gathered by founding members. Other batches included publications such as newsletters (the Center's set is now practically complete). One of the largest bodies of material came from the past ACHNE president and committee chair, Dr. Marcia Stanhope, covering the years from 1991-1994. More recently, the Archives Committee forwarded a collection of oral history tapes and transcripts of interviews with past ACHNE presidents, prepared by the committee for the organization's 20th anniversary celebration in 1998.
